GOONJ.. a voice, an effort

ANNUAL REPORT I 2017-18
Dear Friend of Goonj

One more year of learning from the grassroots, a series of innovations and spreading thin and deep.

While putting together this annual report for the last year we are in the midst of floods relief work in Kerala, a state that has not known floods... witnessing the worst floods and landslides. Similar floods have also devastated some other states too...

Goonj was initiated on a very basic question, ‘Why do we need a disaster to reach out to people even though half the world doesn’t need a disaster. Poverty in itself is a big disaster.’ We found that winter is a much bigger disaster than earthquakes or floods, in terms of suffering. We realized that fire in the villages and slums is another ignored disaster which affects lakhs of people every year.

In the last 19 years of our work we have tried to bring attention and resources to these invisible disasters as they bring life back to zero every few months. Our Cloth for Work initiative turned out to be a game changer after disasters as the affected people worked to revive their infrastructure, water bodies to roads to receive the relief kits with dignity. As we look at the year gone by we notice that the urban surplus we are channelizing to rural India has a huge impact, not only in saving and reviving our natural resources but in redefining the economic well-being of the families receiving the carefully curated material, as a reward.

We are still discovering many layers and aspects about our work and its impact on the last person we connect with. The Good news is.. that the idea is spreading, getting much more acceptance and a simple piece of old cloth or shoe or a utensil to furniture is turning into a huge resource for hardcore rural development works. It is growing bigger and deeper with the contribution of the masses in the cities and villages. That gives us hope everyday..

This year’s report has some insightful information and some powerful pictures from the Bharat in our India; a true depiction of the power of the so called powerless and skills of the so called un-skilled. Hope you also enjoy looking at them..

At the end of 19 years of work.. it’s time for change...and churning.. We have been speaking about Goonj 3.0.. that churning is on our mind.. to find a new path, a deeper one.. The goal is to make sure that people replicate and multiply.

Join Us and as I always say- Lagey Raho.

with warm wishes

A look back..

Goonj works on turning old material as a resource for hundreds of rural development activities. Communities have built huge bamboo bridges, dug up wells, have done bunding of acres of land, developed small irrigation canals, built drainage systems, built village schools and have taken up massive exercises of repairing roads, developing water harvesting systems to cleaning up water bodies. All these works are done but by making people understand their own community power and giving usable old material as a reward.

In remote villages across India, every year our work is growing and spreading. In the last three years alone there has been more than 60% increase in the number of activities.

Even though our work is sector agnostic we see a deep direct impact on various issues like Water, Agriculture, Sanitation, Education, Menstrual hygiene and Access for the communities we work with. We treat these communities as our rural stakeholders and put the decision making on what issues will be prioritized, in their hands. That’s why they work with a sense of ownership with their own resources and wisdom.

Every day it reminds us that when we value people, value their wisdom and resources and treat them with dignity, amazing things happen. Different need based Material Kits are their only reward and motivation for the efforts they make to solve their own problems.
Turning Urban surplus into a resource for Water Conservation...
India’s water crisis is a well-known fact and the worst affected is rural India where traditional water sources like wells, ponds, rivers, and dams are fast dwindling. Goonj works with the core principle of Improving Before Changing. Focusing on reviving the already present water-related resources in villages, our teams mobilize village communities to clean their ponds/wells and revive their water bodies using local resources and indigenous knowledge.

Apart from improving the quality of water, these activities have impacted lives of people struggling with droughts and water scarcity. It also impacts many other issues like agriculture, economic well-being, nutrition, education, migration, and makes the quality of life of the communities better, especially women.

889 water related activities
Sanitation
Sanitation connects directly to the health of people so cleanliness drives including road cleaning, cleaning water bodies in vicinity, cleaning of schools/aanganwadis and community spaces like parks etc were undertaken. Also unclogging of drains was carried out at massive level.

Their reward was carefully designed “Family kits” comprising of re-purposed basic essentials like clothing, utility items given by people from cities.
Agriculture and Environment
This year people in rural India worked on community farming, land bunding, making kitchen gardens and irrigation and other related activities to make their agriculture better across the country. Like water, agriculture is deeply connected to the life and well-being of rural India. People worked on 185 such agricultural activities and 102 environment conservation activities. This work has been taken up largely on the initiative and prioritizing by the rural communities themselves. The result is improved agricultural output, better nutrition and cut down on seasonal unemployment.

Planting of more than 20,000 trees is a new beginning..
Access and Infrastructure
Development and strengthening of local infrastructure and access has over the years emerged as a strong point of Goonj’s work in rural India. Our pragmatic and cost-effective approach involves use of local skills, enterprises, labor, raw materials and indigenous knowledge of the local community to undertake big projects like making bridges, making/repairing roads and similar large-scale development activities.

This bottom up approach also enables better maintenance of existing infrastructural assets while encouraging local community participation and ownership in taking care of what they have.
Menstrual Health and Hygiene
Not Just a Piece of Cloth initiative is more about breaking the culture of shame and silence around menstruation. This is attained through providing sustainable biodegradable better piece of cloth to women who struggle for cloth every month. When people from urban India contribute their cotton cloth like bed sheets, curtains and shirts, cloth pad is one of the many useful things for rural India, we turn the un-wearable cloth into.

We use ‘MY Pads’ as a tool to normalize the highly taboo issue of menstruation to create the space where women can talk about their menstrual challenges, breaking the strong culture of shame and silence around it. Chuppi Todo Baithaks (Break the Silence Meetings) are the meetings with men and women to open up a dialogue and initiate conversation on this issue.

Reached 10,41,100+ ‘MY Pads’ Organised 1400+ “Chuppi Todo Baithaks” (Break the Silence Meetings) with men and women in cities and villages.
School to School
Filling critical resource gaps in education
Goonj works with children in urban and rural schools on two opposite ends of the resource spectrum of abundance and scarcity for learning material like stationery, books and uniforms. Goonj’s ‘School To School’ initiative is bridging this gap by channelizing underutilized urban school material as a resource for addressing the gaps in rural educational resources with dignity.

All stakeholders in education; teachers, children, parents, local community get involved in addressing the issues of learning and education. Children take up various learning and behavior change activities for which they are rewarded with School Kits.
One Side Used Paper
We haven’t bought a single sheet of paper since our inception and we also inspire other organizations of such practices that lessen the environmental burden of waste.

1,44,900+ sheets of One Side Used Paper re-used..
An innovative idea born out of need. Sujni is the traditional cloth quilt of rural India layered with tattered and shredded pieces of clothes stitched together. It’s used as a quilt in winters and as a mattress in summers and Aasan is a small sitting mat, made out of layering up torn cloth pieces.

Giving a larger dimension to massive quantities of under-utilised material (without changing its nature or utility) as a huge resource for solving difficult challenges for the most marginalised communities across India. Instead this discard is empowering people to solve their own problems and enhancing their dignity in the process.
Turning urban surplus into a resource for neglected basic needs of people

Goonj.. KITS

Turning urban surplus into a resource for neglected basic needs of people
All the material collected from the cities is carefully turned into various specific Material Kits, after careful need assessment of people in the villages of India. After rigorous sorting, segregating, repairing, stitching and mending, material is carefully packed into comprehensive kits for different needs of rural communities in far-flung remote villages.

No one gets these kits free, instead these are given as reward for the efforts of people to solve any of their neglected issues. That’s how these kits turn into a powerful resource and tool for development work.
Over 140,000 families were rewarded carefully designed “Family Kits” this year.

Comprises of basic essentials like clothing, utility items, children clothing toiletries, blankets, sujinis, etc. to fulfill a family’s need in a village.

Reached 39,416 School/Aanganwadi Kits this year alone.

Kit has books, toys, stationary, uniforms etc. to turn schools and Aanganwadis into colorful, happy spaces where kids like to come and spend time.
Goonj has been working consistently on disaster relief for two decades now. Rahat Relief Kits are an essential part of our disaster relief work. It is packed keeping in mind the needs of a disaster hit family.

This pack is created keeping in mind the needs of a disaster hit family, they usually comprise of good quantities of dry rations, basic toiletries, tarpaulins, utensils, sanitary pads, woolens etc.

This year, we reached out 240+ comprehensive Wedding Kits. We also provided 11 Pandal kits*

This kit includes lehengas/gowns made out of surplus Mata ki chunnis (colorful cloth used for religious ceremonies), other wedding apparel, fancy jewellery, cosmetics, fancy footwear etc. for a new couple to make their wedding a special occasion which otherwise is a major expense.

* The kit includes utensils, blankets and daris (mats) in large quantities given as community asset for major functions and weddings in villages.
Goonj designs small kits of essential material for specific small enterprises like a carpentry kit or mason kit etc. given to people after careful need assessment to help them start their own small enterprise for livelihood.

Goonj designs small kits of essential basic material to support tough life of laborers, who generally migrate to different geographies for better livelihood opportunities. These kits help them to sustain in a new environment and increase their work efficiency. Apart from basic essentials, carefully chosen winter clothing like woolens, boots and coats are included.

This year around 3600+ individuals/families were benefitted.
Menstrual Dignity Pack

This year 104,100+ Menstrual Dignity Packs were dispatched.

Consists of 10 reusable cloth pads, undergarment, disposable sheet and a information leaflet with basic dos and don’ts of healthy menstrual practices.

Office/Institutional Kits: Comprises of basic office material including office equipment and furniture to support and build the capacities of our rural partner organizations. Channelized 130 such kits in support of partner organizations and institutions across India.

Some other Kits like Sports Kits (80+), Rural Volunteer Kits (143) are made and reached out to different entities in villages and even cities across India based on the needs of the stakeholders and communities we work with.

When you look at our Balance Sheet- Please Note..

That it is a full-fledged organisation of a few hundred people, working in 23 states and also handles a large number of disasters which do not get media attention.

We try to keep a cushion for the running expenses of one year for rentals, transport, people, PF- ESI to many regular expenses but not able to maintain it and have now decided to make a corpus from next year and reach out to you for the contribution for that too.

Most of our money comes during disaster for relief and rehabilitation work which go on for 3 to 5 years depending on the scale of disasters and the same money is kept and utilized as per need over a period of these few years only for the pre decided purposes.

Unfortunately most of the money comes during disasters or for work in a few states only and states like Bihar, West Bengal, Odisha, North eastern states, Uttar Pradesh, Chhattisgarh, Uttarakhand are grossly ignored which certainly need more attention and support from individuals and institutions without binding the geography and cause.
